Germans Claim New Advances In Donets Basin; Reported Stopped Near Rostov.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—A high-ranking neutral military observer said today that reliable information from Russia indicated the German attack on Moscow and in the north was definitely halted.

(By Associated Press)

Soviet dispatches pictured Adolf Hitler's invasion armies as suffering enormous losses on the Moscow front today with "literally every meter of ground covered with the bodies of Fascist soldiers and officers" as the Germans drove toward the Russian capital from the Mozhaisk sector, only 57 miles away.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the Germans hurled tanks, motorized infantry and aviation into the assault which developed into hand-to-hand fighting.

The news agency said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's Red troops fell back to new lines only where the Germans were able to concentrate numerical superiority. The depth of the withdrawal was not disclosed.

Winter's first snow fell over the Mozhaisk region and a bitter wind howled over the steppes, piling snow on roads and in forests.

Hitler's field headquarters, silent on any new advance in the operations before Moscow, declared that Axis troops driving into the Donets river industrial basin in the Ukraine had scored further advances.

By contrast, reports reaching London said Red army troops had stopped the German thrust toward Rostov, gateway to the Caucasian oil fields, after evacuating Tanganrog, 30 miles to the west.

A Russian broadcast said the Germans had lost more than

Vining to Boost Enthusiasm for Big Tyger Tilt

Mansfielders' enthusiasm over the football game with Massillon Friday night will get another boost Thursday afternoon when Sam Vining, Mansfield salesman, address a "pep" rally in the Senior high school auditorium.

Author of books on salesmanship and nationally known for his humorous lectures before clubs and sales organizations, Vining is expected to put new inspiration into the team and its backers for the all-important game at Massillon.

Other speakers at the rally, set for 2:30 p. m., are Coach Paul Snyder and Co-captains William Pecht and Edward Arlin of the Tygers.

In addition to a rehearsal of school cheers and songs, eight cheer leaders will present a skit proving conclusively that the Mansfield Tygers will wallop the so far undefeated Massillon aggregation, Glen Rohleder, school principal, said today.

As evidence that other Mansfielders beside the pupils had allowed the game excitement to reach epidemic proportions, George Sherman, faculty member in charge of ticket sales, reported that all but 10 of the 3,500 tickets placed on sale in Mansfield to adults had been sold.

The 1,000 tickets alloted to high school youths also have been taken.

Advices from Massillon today said 5,000 bleacher seats would be sold at the gate for the game.

Sherman warned, however, that all tickets laid aside for Mans-

Rays of Hope Begin to Disperse Gloom From Mansfield's Defense-Hit Industrial Picture

From several directions, definite rays of light today brightened the darkness that has hovered over Mansfield's industrial and employment situation.

One of those rays of light was directed Mansfield-wise yesterday in Washington, when Floyd B. Odlum, director of the contract distribution service of the Office of Production Management brought the city's dilemma to the attention of a senate committee, and declared his office would do "everything within its power and more if it had to" to remedy the situation.

Another ray of light was the well-authenticated report that an order for shot for tank and anti-tank guns would soon be placed with Westinghouse in Mansfield.

Westinghouse officials left Mansfield this morning, it was learned, to confer with army ordnance officers in Cleveland. However, heads of the Mansfield plant had no word on the contract, and army officials still would not talk.

Cleveland dispatches said the conference was scheduled for this afternoon, but gave no indication as to whether the contract would be signed today.

Perhaps of lesser intensity, but still a ray of light, came out of the meeting yesterday of Ohio small businessmen with Republican congressmen in Columbus, at which they declared that something was "amiss" with the method of distributing defense contracts and demanded that small business men be "given a break."

This Is the OPM Diagnosis

Here, in skeletonized form, is the summary of OPM findings concerning Mansfield:

City of about 37,000 . . . largely dependent on manufacture durable consumer goods . . . present factory employment about 13,000, about third of whom employed by Westinghouse.

As result of curtailed refrigerator production, Westinghouse has laid off more than 700 workers . . . more expected to be laid off in future . . . other industries facing labor displacement include Tappan Stove, Humphryes Manufacturing, Dominion . . . net labor displacement estimated at 2,500 . . . may go higher unless additional defense work is placed.

Steps Taken Toward Cure

This is what has been done and planned locally to obtain defense contracts and escape employment reductions:

OPM defense caravans brought here, factories checked on possibility of seeking subcontracts . . . Chamber of Commerce becomes clearing house on all navy needs . . . CIO council and manufacturers set up parallel committees to work with OPM on contracts . . . C. of C. also acting as liaison between OPM and local factories on all defense contracts open.

In addition to this, Mansfield plants now have defense contracts totalling $3,000,000 and Westinghouse starts work in spring on $3,000,000 binocular order.

39 Seamen of Lehigh Saved, Officials Say

15 Still Missing From Bold Venture After Sinking Near Iceland; Two New Attacks Bring Sinking To Ten; Piracy Hit.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The United States Lines said today all 39 members of the crew of the torpedoed freighter Lehigh had been rescued.

The ship, operated by the U. S. Lines, was sunk by a submarine in the South Atlantic Sunday.

The lines said their information on the rescue came from officials in Washington.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday announced the sinking of the Lehigh and said that 22 of her crew had been picked up from a lifeboat and the remaining 17 were missing. The ship had an all-American crew.

The Lehigh was one of two American-owned merchant vessels whose loss was revealed yesterday. The state department announced the sinking of the Bold Venture, which occurred last Thursday near Iceland. The Bold Venture was American-owned but flying the flag of Panama.

Seventeen of the Bold Venture's crew were rescued and taken to Iceland, but the remaining 15 crewmen were missing and presumed lost.

Details of the rescue of the Lehigh crew were not revealed by the U. S. Lines.

The two new torpedoings pushed the sea war's toll of American-owned merchantmen to ten, and in Washington President Roosevelt made plain that he considered one of the sinkings a particularly flagrant act of piracy.

The South and North Atlantic are being searched by navy patrols for any trace of additional survivors and also for a shooting chance at any raider.

President Roosevelt himself announced the torpedoing of the Lehigh to press conference yesterday—with regret, he said somberly—and he dwelt pointedly on the circumstances of the sinking. There was no doubt he regarded it as additional argument for putting guns on American merchantmen.

The Lehigh, he said, had discharged a cargo at Bilbao, Spain, and was proceeding southward empty, without cargo, on a trading voyage to the Gold coast. She was sunk just north of the equator between South America and Africa, he said.

After reporting that early dispatches said one lifeboat had been picked up—it contained 22 survivors, some of them wounded by the torpedo explosion—and that two other lifeboats were still missing, Mr. Roosevelt indicated he thought the facts of the incident were eloquent enough.

He stressed the fact that the American merchantman carried no cargo, and informed sources said later that this fact was important for it eliminated any

Second Nazi Officer Assassinated

PETAIN ALARMED AS GERMANS NAB MORE HOSTAGES

Will Appeal To People; 50 Are Executed For Earlier Slaying.

(By United Press)

VICHY, France—A German army major was shot dead at Bordeaux last night 36 hours after the killing of a colonel at Nantes which caused the Germans to execute 50 French hostages and to threaten the execution of 50 more, it was disclosed today.

It was reported that the Germans had immediately arrested 50 Frenchmen in Bordeaux to hold as hostages and execute if the killers were not caught.

Alarmed by the new assassination, Chief of State Marshal Henri Philippe Petain and Admiral Jean Francois Darlan, his vice premier in the Vichy government, made emergency arrangements for a day-long series of broadcasts to the nation, appealing for cessation of attacks.

Announcing that 50 Frenchmen had been shot this morning at Nantes—hostages executed by the Germans because the killers of Lieut. Col. Karl Friedrich Holtz, commanding the German Nantes base, had not been arrested, Petain said:

"If the assassins are caught 100 Frenchmen can be saved. Do not let harm befall France. Take a stand against the plot."

As Petain and Darlan made their radio appeals, prefectural

PROBING WRECK

Officials Seek Cause of Crash That Injured 28.

RAHWAY, N. J. —(AP)— The Pennsylvania railroad launched an investigation today into the crash of its crack Washington express, the Embassy, and a local train which caused injuries to 28 persons and overturned two cars.

There were no deaths. The crash occurred yesterday at 3:58 p. m. Both trains were westbound.

Most of the injured were taken to Rahway Memorial hospital for treatment. All the casualties occurred in the local, which carried about 40 passengers. The express had between 300 and 400 on board.

The electric locomotive of the express plowed into the third car of the five-car electric local and then hit the second car. Both coaches overturned, but the three other cars remained on the tracks.

As Stubborn Fire Hits Down Town Home

$20,000 BLAZE HITS RESIDENCE

Firemen Battle Smoldering Fire In Down Town Home, Physicians Offices.

Breaking out in the basement and spreading to the walls, a stubborn, smoldering fire today caused damage estimated at $20,000 to the 11-room residence quarters and the adjoining offices of Dr. C. R. Damron and Dr. L. B. Bonar at 30 South Mulberry street.

The two-story residence structure, occupied by the Damron family, and two suites of offices, smoke-damaged and water-soaked, were still smoldering at noon today.

Flames broke through the walls as firemen plied streams of water into the basement to prevent the fire from spreading Billows of smoke rolled from every window dispersing the crowd that had gathered around the house.

Three fire companies were dispatched to the fire scene by Chief Charles Seeburger shortly after an alarm was sent in at 10 a. m.

Cause of the blaze was not determined. It evidently started in the basement and then spread into

OPEN CONGRESS

PTA Hears Charge Teaching of Loyalty Neglected.

COLUMBUS—(AP)— Cultivating democratic loyalties in the young "is a task which the American people never discharged successfully" and it took "a Hitler to make us realize it," the Ohio Congress of Parent-Teachers was told today.

"So now," said Mrs. William Kletzer of Portland, Ore., national P. T. A. president, "We turn, panic-stricken, to the school to do this job."

Schools must prepare youth she added, to understand the ideals of democracy and to meet its demands so that America "will have leaders and participating citizens willing to assume obligations for making democracy work."

Mrs. Kletzer spoke at opening sessions of the Ohio Congress' 40th annual convention.

CALLS STRIKES AGGRESSOR AID

OPM Declares No Action Must Be Taken That Will Impede Production of Arms.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Declaring that strikes are the "greatest help the aggressors" in Europe can get, the OPM today issued a long-awaited statement of policy which disclosed that all parties engaged in production of national defense materials, including labor, must take no action impeding arms production.

The statement was issued as the national defense mediation board struggled to avert a new CIO "union shop" strike of 43,000 miners in the so-called captive coal mines of the nation.

The stage for issuing the OPM labor declaration was set by President Roosevelt at Hyde Park last week when he was asked what the government was going to do about strikes in defense industries. The OPM would have something to say about that, was Mr. Roosevelt's answer.

The statement, drawn up by the OPM council composed of Secretary of War Simson, Sec-

Sheriff Orders 'Halloween Patrol' of County Highways

Besieged with reports of Halloween vandalism during the past two nights, Sheriff Frank E. Robinson said today he will put two patrol cars on duty in rural areas near the city nightly until Halloween in an attempt to apprehend some of the pranksters.

"A reasonable number of Halloween pranks may be all right on Halloween night, but this practice of damaging property and endangering lives a week or two ahead is carrying the thing too far," the sheriff said.

He said baled hay was piled in Cook road last night which made driving hazardous in the heavy fog. Fodder shocks were placed on the Taylortown road northwest of the city, and cans and broken bottles were scattered over other roads in suburban districts, according to reports to the sheriff.

An East Mansfield resident reported that boys broke street lights along an entire street near his home.

Pranksters who are caught destroying property or building obstructions in roads and streets will be taken into juvenile court and forced to pay for any damages resulting from their tricks, Sheriff Robinson said.

MAYOR POINTS TO RECORD IN CAMPAIGN TALK

Relates Accomplishments of Past Two Years In Asking Return To Office.

Citing improvements in the city's water, sewage and street departments and a program which he said has made definite steps for solving the city's traffic problem, Mayor William J. Locke opened his campaign for re-election last night at a Republican rally which took on the aspects of a community social.

The mayor and other Republican candidates for municipal offices spoke before approximately 1,000 persons at Radio City hall, North Walnut street. They were entertained by vaudeville acts, a free lunch and dancing.

Introduced by Probate Judge Stuart H. Cramer who said Locke had given the city a "good, square and clean administration," the mayor related, one by one, the accomplishments he claimed for his administration. He made no mention of his opponent, Fred M. Bushnell, Democratic mayoralty candidate, nor any direct reply to attacks on his administration.

"I have no intention of attempting to take the entire credit for these accomplishments, for I have had the full co-operation of the whole administration," Locke said.

He said his administration had followed the recommendation of

SPUR: Six Sinkings Speed Up Campaign to Scrap Neutrality

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The record of six American-owned ships sunk in as many weeks put fresh impetus today behind a senate campaign for scrapping the neutrality act completely and authorizing American ships to sail the seven seas anywhere.

Another new factor was the demand made by Wendell L. Willkie and 100 of the country's leading Republican figures for flat repeal of the entire act.

The big question apparently was no longer senate concurrence in the house-approved revision which would permit the arming of ships, but whether the house resolution would be broadened to end all present prohibitions on the movements of American flag ships to belligerent ports or through combat zones.

Advocates of outright repeal indicated that they had no doubts about the approval of ship arming, particularly after yesterday's announcement of the sinking of the Lehigh and the Bold Venture.

The new sinkings put American-owned ship losses on a one-a-week average for the period since Sept. 5.

With the foreign relations committee convening to hear opposition witnesses on the armed-ship bill, Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) told reporters it was obvious that "Germany will pay no attention to our combat zones or to her own—she will sink any ships she can get any time she can get to them.

"But every time Germany sinks a ship, it makes it more certain that our vessels will be armed promptly."

Although emphasizing his conviction that American merchantmen should be armed, Connally reiterated his view that congress likewise should lift the restriction on American ship movements.

From New York, meanwhile, came notification that Willkie and more than 100 Republicans representing all sections of the country had joined in a demand for outright repeal of the neutrality act.

"Millions upon millions of Republicans are resolved that the ugly smudge of obstructive isolationism shall be removed from the face of their party," Willkie said in a statement accompanying a telegram to members of congress.

GERMANS PRESS NEAR MOSCOW DESPITE LOSSES

Reds Assert Bodies Strew Battlefront, Admit Attack on Moshaisk.

5,000 men under tank-led Red army attacks southwest of Moscow—presumably in the Maloyaroslavets sector, where Nazi spearheads have been reported within 50 miles of the Kremlin.

Soviet reports also told of renewed German attempts to advance east from Orel, with heavy fighting raging along the Orel-Mtensk highway. Mtensk is 175 miles southeast of Moscow.

In the north, the Russians said Red troops defending Moscow were inflicting severe losses on the German siege forces, killing 500 in one engagement and 400 in another.

Soviet correspondents reported that Russian resistance was stiffening steadily northwest of Moscow, in the Kalinin sector, and that violent Red army counter-attacks had smashed back a German attempt to cross a river there.

Hitler's high command gave no details of the asserted new advance into the Donets river basin.

In the Bryansk sector, 200 miles south of Moscow, the high command said mopping up operations had led to the capture of 5,000 more prisoners and 56 guns.

In the war in the air, five successive waves of RAF bombers attacked Naples, Italy, for five hours during the night in the heaviest raid there since Italy entered the war, June 10, 1940.

Premier Mussolini's high command, acknowledging "huge damage to dwellings," listed 14 killed and 27 wounded as the RAF dropped hundreds of incendiary and explosive bombs on the maritime and industrial city of 925,000. It was the second raid on Naples in less than a week, a British attack last Thursday night having killed 12 and injured 37.

As the Russian campaign entered its fifth month, a Red army bulletin broadcast by the Moscow radio said all-night fighting raged in the sectors of Moshaisk; Maloyarsolavets, 65 miles southwest of Moscow; and Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of the capital — the same areas mentioned for the past two days.

Advices reaching London said roads on the Moscow front were becoming almost impassable.

Nevertheless, Gen. Fedor von Bock's central front armies were reported massing huge new forces of infantry and tanks at Smolesnk and Roslavl for a climactic frontal assault on Moscow. London military experts said the attack, when it comes, would result in a battle 10 times as bloody as any so far chronicled in the war.

Dispatches from Kuibyshev, the new war-time Soviet capital, said columns of Red army reserves were moving west to enter the lines, while eastward out of the danger zone rolled women, children and the aged.

The Soviet radio said that Moscow itself hummed with defense preparations and that trenches, pillboxes and other fortifications were hastily going up in the wooded area just outside the city.

While military observers speculated at the start of the fifth month of the German-Russian war on the trend of the battle of Moscow, a dispatch from Kuibyshev, Russia, said that Premier Stalin's government still was established in the Kremlin of the menaced city.

Kuibyshev, 550 miles airline east and slightly south of Moscow on the east bank of the Volga, apparently is to become the Soviet war capital if the Red army center fails to hold.

An Associated Press correspondent wrote that "the constant shuffle of reserves westward and civilians eastward, high morale, unbroken communications and adequate food supplies all are coupled by observers as indications of preparations for a long and continuing war.

Military reports to London indicated that the battle for Moscow might be decided eventually in a vast frontal engagement, rather than by the pincer and counter-pincer tactics which thus far have distinguished the war.

Russians declared they had stopped the spreading German arc of encirclement at Kalinin, 95 miles southwest of Moscow, and at Orel, 200 miles to the south.

Germans said a paralyzing blow had been dealt Russian industry by the southern Nazi drive into the Donets basin

Berlin commentators said 3,200,000 Russians had been captured and 19,000 Red army tanks destroyed.

Meanwhil, Britain and Mexico agreed to resume diplomatic relations which were broken May 13, 1938, over the oil expropriation issue.

Japan was declared by the Japanese Times and Advertiser, a newspaper close to the Tokyo foreign office, to be ready to use her influence to "bring others into the realm of peace."

British bombers struck at northwestern Germany again last night while squadrons of shorter-range fighting planes attacked airdromes in occupied France and the Netherlands, British authorities said. Germans declared the damage was minor.

German night raiders destroyed houses at several points and caused a small number of casualties, the British said, in thrusts along the British east coast and a number of points in the northwest.

INDUSTRY SEES RAYS OF HOPE

Washington Action In Studying Situation, Defense Orders Brighten Picture.

Representatives of Mansfield industries and business and the CIO United Electrical and Radio Workers union joined small businessmen from four states in an appeal for a "reasonable allocation" of metals, ethyl alcohol, cottons and woolens, and other materials earmarked for defense at a conference with the Republican Small Business Defense committee in Columbus.

In the delegation from Mansfield were officials of the Tappan Stove company, Sun Glow Industries, Humphryes Manufacturing company, and J. W. Hawkins, representative of the CIO union.

William Mohnlein of Cincinnati, cotton and woolen goods jobber, told the committee that he had been unable to supply badly-needed corduroys to the Mansfield reformatory because he could not obtain a priority release.

"I can't understand why, with only one per cent of our population in the army, we can't get goods for some of the needs of the other 99 per cent," Mohnlein sad. "I have been told I would find the answer in the lease-lend bill."

Asking that the government "Give the small sub-contractor some kind of break," Ross Weygandt, Wooster aluminum manufacturer, expressed his complaint this way: "What will it profit us to save the world and destroy our own commercial life at home?"

Clarence Karst, official of a Cincinnati firm, quoted advertisements in the British Export Gazette offering sale and delivery of several materials such as copper wire, machine tools, and steel which are almost impossible to obtain because of priorities in the United States.

"My company, on the strength of those advertisements, has sent an order for five cars of steel from England," Karst asserted. "It this defense business is serious and the British have all those goods to export after what they've gone through, we are beginning to believe that something is wrong somewhere in our defense set-up."

The picture was presented this way by James G. Daly, Columbus, representing the United Commercial Travelers association: "The small business man is being forced out of business by priorities and that's the meat of our whole problem."

Daly charged that one of the principal causes of the trouble is the fact that the government has on order twice as much, or more, raw materials than ever will be made into finished goods." He said that the army alone had enough uniforms on order to supply an army "ten times its present size."

The Republican investigating committee will submit its findings to the OPM—to help find means of preventing industrial shut-downs and unemployment in industrial centers like Mansfield.

question of contraband as an attempted excuse for the torpedoing.

The president's press conference had scarcely dispersed before the Bold Venture joined the Lehigh on the day's sinking list. The first reports originated in New York maritime circles and later the treasury department confirmed that this freighter had gone to the bottom en route from Baltimore to England with a cargo of cotton, steel, copper, and general merchandise.

News of the two sinkings aroused ardent administration supporters in congress, and at least one critic, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said that the Lehigh's case, judging by available facts, appeared "without justification or any excuse."

The president advised the conference to use the process of elimination to arrive at the nationality of the attacking submarine.

It certainly wasn't a British submarine, he volunteered, or one of ours, or an Argentine submarine, or a French submarine.

Where were these submarines in the South Atlantic coming from?

Some were operating from bases in occupied France, Mr. Roosevelt said, and some were being refueled at sea by tankers from the same relative area. The trouble was that the refueling spot varied and was difficult to locate.

Nazis Repeat FDR Causes 'Incidents'

BERLIN—(INS)—Germany today again accused the Roosevelt administration of fabricating sea incidents in an effort plunge the United States into war.

Nazi officials disclaimed any knowledge of the announced sinking of the American freighter Lehigh and the American-owned Bold Venture.

"In any case," a spokesman said, "the United States government is not qualified to complain. The ships flew the flag of Panama."

(Editor's Note: Official Washington said the Lehigh was sailing under the Stars and Stripes. The Bold Venture flew the Panama flag.)

Friends of Torpedo Victim Ask Action

GILLESPIE, Ill —(AP)— Twenty Gillespie residents today told President Roosevelt that George Alexander Calvert, fellow townsman and a victim of the Kearny torpedoing, was "murdered as Hitler openly declared war on the people of the United States," and "we call for action now."

The group, which included Calvert's survivors, sent a telegram to Mr. Roosevelt which said in part:

"We turn our faces to the east with the grim determination that the Nazi menace to our freedom must be destroyed, that the Nazi attack against America must be answered and smashed.

"Yes, we call for action now. Arm our merchant ships. Repeal the neutrality act Use the full force of our navy to sweep the bandits from the seas. Help open a western front. Rush immediate and all-out aid to every county fighting Hitler" the walls of the residence, firemen said.

Using three hose lines, firemen were forced to flood the residence and the physicians' offices in a brick building which adjoins the frame residence.

Mrs. Damron, at work in the kitchen, discovered the fire when she opened the basement door. Smoke filled the room and she immediately phoned central fire station.

All the equipment in Dr. Bonar's office was saved before firemen flooded the two offices to keep fire from spreading but the instruments in Dr. Damron's office were not removed before the smoke and water poured into that section of the building.

The Damron's have three children, Carroll in Senior High school, and Ruth and John Charles in John Simpson Junior High school. Mrs. Damron's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Falk, and Miss Bertha Witschi, secretary to Dr. Damron, also shared the residence.

Dr. Damron, who was at the hospital when the smoke was discovered, said that he "had no idea what started the fire unless it was spontaneous combustion." The Damrons had their winter supply of coal and wood in the basement and the fire may have originated from combustion.

engineers and the state health department in making changes in the water and sewage systems.

"During the past 20 months approximately seven miles of new water lines have been installed in our city, paid for out of operating revenue, and after paying for these improvements we have a very substantial balance in our water fund which will be used in further carrying out the recommendations of the Gascoigne report," he said.

The report to which he referred was compiled by Gascoigne and associates, consulting engineers, following a survey of the Mansfield water supply in 1937.

Mansfield faces no immediate problem in the matter of water supply," Locke said. "It is only in keeping with good business methods to explore further and develop additional supplies for the future," he added.

He said the city is now planning to drill an additional well in the Clearfork area. He cited a reduction of $38,000 in the city water works department debit since 1939.

Asserting that 45 per cent of the roof water which had been responsible for flooding basements has been eliminated from the storm sewers, Locke said the basement flooding situation has been "greatly improved but not entirely solved.

He said the administration followed the recommendations of a Citizens' Traffic and Parking committee in installing parking meters and taking steps to reroute truck traffic away from the downtown area He also pointed to the new traffic squad and parking limitations in the downtown area as other attempts successful attempts to help the traffic problem.

The mayor said the administration deserves credit for repaving West Fourth street and widening and paving Sturges avenue from Cline avenue to Lexington avenue.

In the matter of public welfare, Locke said "The merit rating system of civil service has been fostered and encouraged under our administration."

He said "It is my belief that additional street equipment and a comprehensive sewer system can be obtained within the next two years out of current revenue."

The Democrats will hold their third rally at 8 p. m., Thursday in party headquarters in the Martin hardware building with Bushnell, the candidate for mayor, and City Solicitor Marion D. Ward as principal speakers.

BUICK BUILDS FOR DEFENSE
Our assignment: Building Pratt & Whitney valve-in-head aircraft engines for defense use.

What's it got you haven't got in your present automobile?

HERE stands an automobile —the automobile, we believe, of 1942.

What's in it to make it that—and to lay fair claim on your attention? Well . . .

There's a valve-in-head engine in it. The same type of engine that's used in every modern airplane.

There's FIREBALL compression in it. Specially contoured Domite pistons that wring more good out of every drop of gasoline.

There's Compound Carburetion† in it. A constant check and double check on gas usage to see that you get both power and range from the fuel you buy.

There are crankpins and journals in it with an oil-cushion finish that multiplies bearing life.

There are new connecting rods that take up the heavier burden of present piston materials without adding a single mote of weight.

There are new broadrim wheels on it that not only get maximum mileage from tires, but steady the ride, take heel-over out of sharp corners, hold you on your track like a streamliner on its rails.

There is a torque-tube drive such as you find in America's fastest fighting planes.

There are soft all-coil springs, forever gentle and easy, that never need any mothering care.

There are ruggedness, sturdiness, dependability, frugal use of gasoline and oil — thriftiness through low upkeep.

And if you like life, and action, and ability, why not see for yourself how prompt its response, how smooth its ride, how light its handling, how roomy and comfortable Buick is?

In short—why not try out this Buick and see why it is the automobile of 1942?

No other car has ALL THIS FOR YOU IN 'FORTY-TWO

COUNCIL TALKS PARKING METERS

Bucyrus Officials Fail To Take Action, Hear Merchant Protests.

BUCYRUS—Bucyrus city council continued its study of parking meters Tuesday night when L. G. Wilkir of the Michaels Art Bronze company of Cincinnati and Covington appeared before council to demonstrate a meter sold by his company.

Considerable opposition to the installation of meters was expressed by George David, Bucyrus restaurant proprietor, who stated that he was appearing in protest in behalf of Bucyrus merchants whom, he stated, "are 10° percent opposed to the meters."

The question remains in the hands of the traffic commission, where it went two weeks ago when council first took the matter under consideration. Chief of Police Arthur Stuckert announced during Tuesday night's discussion that the traffic commission was 100 percent in favor of parking meters although no report to council has been given by the commission chairman, Mayor William F. Whiteamire.

Meters will collect an estimated thirty cents each per day, Wilkin declared which on 350 meters would mean collections of more than $1,000 a month. Chief Stuckert indicated that 218 meters would be needed to completely equip the congested area.

Other business conducted by council included the adoption of several ordinances, one for amending the water works section annual appropriation ordinance to provide funds for the remainder of the year, and an ordinance transferring certain sums within the annual appropriation. An ordinance was also adopted authorizing the service director to purchase certain materials with which to operate the water works plant.

City Auditor C. C. AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1941.

Japan is rapidly piling up a silk surplus—all dressed up and no place to go.

Action is now being taken to break up an alleged cranberry trust—but probably not in time to affect the Thanksgiving budget.

If October weather could be as dependably fine as it has been this year it might soon take place as the most delightful month of the year.

For Better Fire Protection

ASIDE from the importance of sharing in the responsibility of electing city officials, there is one matter to be settled at the election a week from next Tuesday which should appeal to every voter.

This is the proposal to approve a one-half mill tax levy to rehabilitate Mansfield's fire-fighting equipment, which is now sadly inadequate to protect industrial, business and residential property in this city against fire losses.

There is an inclination among many people to minimize fire dangers, except at times immediately after losses have occurred, and it would probably take no more than a destructive fire between now and election day to assure passage of the levy proposal.

But why should that be necessary? Why not consider conditions as they are and realize that a half-mill levy is a small matter as compared with the greater safety that will be enjoyed as a result of modernizing fire department equipment and extending the zones of quick protection against fires?

An effort will be made, from now until election day, to acquaint Mansfield voters with the urgent need for fire department betterments, and the uses to which money will be put, in event of passage of the proposed levy. This subject merits the thoughtful attention of every voter.

Circulation Peak Is Tribute To City

WHEN THE NEWS-JOURNAL, a day or so ago, used a page of advertising space to announce that the September average "net paid daily circulation" of this newspaper reached an all-time high of 21,208, that message was intended to convey much more than mere information about circulation growth.

Its real purpose was to direct public attention, in Mansfield and elsewhere, to the universality of daily newspaper reading in this community, and its environs—and to thus gain more widespread recognition of one of the elements that has contributed materially to the advancement and well being of this city and the surrounding area—an informed citizenship.

Thinking back to a time when Mansfield daily newspaper circulation was struggling toward the 5,000 mark, watching growth to 10,000, then to 15,000, and now to above 21,000, it is evident that the habit of daily newspaper reading has increased more rapidly than population and that a daily paper is now regarded as a necessity in practically every home in this city and vicinity in which English is spoken and read.

A newspaper's service to its community is in two fields—circulation and advertising—and in both of these it reflects the spirit of the city in which it is published—for it would be impossible to meet the high cost of producing a complete, representative newspaper without sufficient income derived from these two sources.

It has been the fortunate experience of Mansfield that mercantile growth has consistently kept pace with civic progress in general, with alert merchants, and other users of newspaper advertising space, realizing the advantages of having a dependable medium through which to convey their messages and invite patronage.

During the past few years, as a result of increasing patronage, it has been possible for The News-Journal to add equipment, features and news-gathering facilities which expanded opportunity to give better service, and, at the 21,208 circulation mark, there is consistently maintained determination on the part of everyone connected with this organization to strive for continued improvement—so that this newspaper may even more worthily serve the fine community of which it is proud to be a part.

More About 'Indian Summer'

THERE is as much discussion about Indian Summer as about the habits of the groundhog. Is there such a thing as Indian Summer, and if so, when does it occur?

Some people say it is just any fine autumn weather. Others insist that it is the period of mild weather following the first spell of autumnal rain and snow, sometimes referred to as "Squaw Winter." Dr. E. Bates of Cornell University, adviser on Indian extension work, says the time is around full moon in November, after the first hard frosts. The Indians have a name for it. They call it the "lazy farmer's moon."

According to their legend, the lazy man lets the harvest ripen, the birds take wing southward, the leaves change color and fall to the earth, and still he postpones getting in his crops. Then come the seasonal gusts of cold wind. The frost maidens sit on the roofs of the lodges, the Great Bear in the sky opens his mouth and the first snow flakes fall. The lazy farmer, in panic and desperation, begs the Great Spirit for one more chance. It comes, with golden sunset, soft haze, benign warmth and great autumnal beauty.

That is our Indian Summer, and by any name or from whatever cause it is one of the most glorious periods of all the seasons. Wise people stop arguing about it and proceed to enjoy it.

Human Nature Again Blamed

THERE is much talk nowadays about "bottlenecks" in industry, but an educator thinks the greatest bottleneck in an effort to make a better world is human nature.

"Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn," said the poet. This figure might now be raised to "countless millions" without exaggerating. And it all comes from human beings not being humane to each other. A majority of people do fairly well along this line, within national limits, but there are still racial and religious prejudices which hamper progress toward better understanding and eventual permanent world peace.

Eleanor Roosevelt: "Young people learn best from young people"—and young folks can also tell their parents a few things, it seems.

"SO WHAT!"

War Can Be Won By 1943, If—

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—The latest inside news in regard to what the British think about the war is it can be won in 1943 IF the United States comes in.

"If the United States stays out, you can leave the 19 and the 3 and put in any third numeral you wish, making it 1953 or 1963 or 1973," commented one Britisher.

Not only that, but the British EXPECT an expeditionary force, despite all the verbiage to the contrary. In this the same pattern that was followed by events and promises and propaganda in the last war seems to be working out.

It may be recalled that when America entered the last war, in April, 1917, it was thought our only function would be to be the "arsenal of democracy." That has been the story THIS TIME until very recently. The next "push" in 1917 was for a "token" army —"just a little expeditionary force."

THAT was the start then and that is what is being advocated now. The British want the Americans to send a "token" force to co-operate with them and the Free French either to Africa or Persia or both. To Africa to wipe out and mop up the German forces still there, and to Persia to back up the Russians and prevent German capture, later on, of the Iran oil fields.

"Why will that be enough, this time?" the writer asked a prominent British spokesman here.

"To make a little play on words," he replied, "it would be important as a 'fact' rather than as a 'factor.' The news that American soldiers were fighting side by side with us would have a tremendous moral effect, not only on the German people but on the peoples of all the conquered countries, including Italy.

"There is no way of telling, now, whether this spirit of revolt against the conquerors about which we have been hearing so much from Norway, Holland, France, the Balkans and Greece will continue and grow, or whether it will flicker out. The Nazis are ruthless in stamping it out, as everyone knows. They may succeed. No one can tell. We can only hope.

"But there is no great hope of the Germans' collapsing from within—not for a long time, not until, for very satisfactory reasons they have concluded that by fighting on they were only postponing the evil day and were bound to lose in the end. That train of thought might easily be started in German minds by the arrival of some fighting front of United States troops. We know how important that particular moral factor was in ending the last war.

"AT PRESENT the Germans are held together by a fear which cannot be exaggerated—a fear of what would happen to them if they lost the war. Every Dutchman and every Frenchman has in mind at least one German whom he is going to kill if and when. Every Pole has at least six Germans so marked. The Germans know this perfectly well. They are more terrified of that prospect than of any losses in ordinary fighting. And who is going to tell them they are wrong—convincingly?

Incidentally the British are begging Americans in Washington not to be angered at what seems to be lack of gratitude, and what is obvious impatience with America, as expressed in many British newspapers and by some British orators.

"They cannot understand how diversified in opinions your country is," say the Britishers here.

Dream Must Go On

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

IT HAD been one of those moonlit nights they dread so, over there. Everything stark, black against white. Everyone waiting, with no doubt of what would come. And come it did. Out of that pearly heaven, sudden, vomiting hell.

When it was over, the college was a heap of rubble. Only one wall still standing, swaying, threatening. But beneath the rubble, things struggled . . . whimpered . . . their voices ravelling into threads of sound. Last night there had been scores of refugees fleeing from bombed homes. Now, only this. Buried whimpers. Men tearing their hands into bloody stumps to get them out.

The old woman could not whimper. The rubble lay over her, heaped to her withered throat. Only her face and one hand were free. Only her eyes seemed alive . . . clutching like a frightened child's . . . screaming without sound.

So Miss M. had found her when she came on duty. So she sat, for nearly eleven hours in a shell crater, holding the corded hand . . . pouring sips of water over the blue lips . . . talking. Talking about the simple, happy days before the war. Holding back terror, holding back death, with friendly encouraging chat. One hour . . . two . . . three . . . five. Until, at 6:30 a. m., the rescue came.

I'm talking about Margaret Biddle's new book, "The Women of England" (Houghton Mifflin Co., publishers.) You'll remember that her husband was America's ambassador to Poland at the start of the war. The thing got to her. She couldn't stay here in safety, reading about it. Theorizing. She had to go back, see what it really was like . . . the horror and pity, the vileness, the incredible courage and beauty. So back she went.

Now she has written this small, deeply moving book and is using her royalties to help the work of the organizations she describes. And there's something in its quiet tribute which quickens the heart as violence never could.

W. R. N. S. . . . W. A. A. F. . . . A. T. A. . . . the departments stretch endlessly For every English woman is at work. Get that. Get, if you can, what it means, literally. Social distinction forgotten . . . profession and prestige pushed aside . . . personal urgencies blotted out. ENGLAND IS IN TROUBLE. ENGLAND MUST BE SAVED. THE WOMEN OF ENGLAND ARE FIGHTING THIS WAR!

They aren't doing it between a smart luncheon and a Mayfair cocktail party. They're wading to it through the muck and rain, the ashes and blood of a London dawn. They're sticking to it through the screech and roar, the terror and nightmare of a London night.

And, in the old, lovely homes where they once presided so graciously, they are herding swine . . . feeding and delousing half-starved children . . . swabbing pus from rotting flesh . . . steadying frantic minds which have gone astray . . . closing eyes of the dead.

WHEREVER A MAN CAN BE RELEASED FROM CIVILIAN DUTY, AN ENGLISH WOMAN TAKES HIS PLACE. FOR ENGLAND MUST GO ON . . . AND THEY ARE SEEING THAT SHE DOES. Their babies have been sent away. Their husbands are somewhere, fighting. Their sons and brothers are somewhere, dying. BUT ENGLAND IS HERE . . . AND THEY ARE STANDING BY HER.

There are other stories in that book. The story of the young wife who battled her way into a gas-choked, flooded basement, forcing her torn arm through an opening too small for men to follow . . . lifting drowning babies to safety. And, all the time, shielding the presence of her own unborn babe under voluminous hospital aprons, "for fear they wouldn't let me go on."

The story of those long, mysterious, canvas bags. What for? Wide-eyed, the daughter of a sheltered home wondered. Embarrassed, the old man twisted his cap . . . faltered, "W-well, ma'am —you see . . . it's for the pieces."

"IT'S FOR THE PIECES!" If there were no other reason for the war but that, if it were only to save the noble remnants of beauty and decency, gentleness, dignity and fighting faith—that, from their pattern, we might build a new and better world—then that would be enough. For that is the dream we have lived and loved despite our weaknesses.

AND THAT DREAM MUST NEVER DIE!

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Older Generals Will Be Replaced, See Need for More Tactical Skill

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—That sweeping housecleaning of officers now under way in the army is going right up to the top.

Nothing is being said about it, but three of the commanding generals of our four field armies are slated for other assignments.

No immediate change is contemplated in the command of the Third army, headed by tough-jawed Lt.-Gen. Walter Krueger, 60, with headquarters in San Antonio.

As in the case of the hundreds of other officers ousted or shifted, the three lieutenant-generals will be replaced chiefly on the basis of their showing in the field maneuvers this year. Those directed by Drum are still in progress, but there has been a lot wanting in the caliber of leadership so far displayed.

The three army commanders will be succeeded by younger men with greater tactical ability.

Drum, Lear and DeWitt are able organizers and trainers. Generally they have done a good job in whipping their new armies of citizen soldiers into shape. The troops are far more fit and better trained than the AEF was when it went to France.

But the need now is for commanders with outstanding tactical skill who can lead large armies in the field. That's the next important requirement of army training—as the maneuvers and war games conclusively demonstrated.

Of the four army commanders, Krueger displayed the best tactical skill. Much of this was due to his brilliant staff, but he is given high credit for surrounding himself with such crack assistants. Since the Louisiana war games, Kreuger has added another tactical ace to his staff, Lt.-Col. Al Grunther, as deputy chief of staff.

Note: Like Gen. George Marshall, chief of staff of the army, none of the four COs are West Pointers. They all entered the army from civil life during the Spanish-American war and were commissioned as 2nd lieutenants.

British-French Clash.

BRITISH and French forces have clashed on American soil the last few days, but news of the encounter has not leaked out generally.

However, there was nothing secret about the battle. In fact, it occurred in broad daylight and was witnessed by a big crowd.

The clash occurred between men of the Free French submarine, Surcouf, lying in the harbor of Portsmouth, N. H., and the crew of two British submarines in the same harbor. Actual scene of the encounter was the playing fields of the Phillips Exeter academy, about fifteen miles from Portsmouth.

The French wore green shirts, while the British were dressed in blue. Length of the encounter was an hour and a half, divided into two 45-minute halves, with a fifteen minute intermission.

In short, the sailors of the French submarine played a soccer match with the sailors of the British submarines, and the result was a tie, 2-2!

America First Bolter.

IT'S A GOOD ODDS bet that a prominent member of the America First Committee will resign soon.

He is Louis Taber, aggressive, white-thatched head of the nation's largest farm organization, the National Grange.

Taber joined the committee believing sincerely in its professed aim of "keeping the United States out of war," but now frankly admits he made a mistake and has been listening attentively to intimates who have been urging him to get out.

Though he isn't saying so publicly, Taber strongly disagrees with America First's stand against aiding Britain. Also, he is bitterly critical of the committee's failure to repudiate the racial appeals of ex-Colonel Lindbergh.

Taber acted like anything but an American Firster when he went to the White House recently with other farm leaders to discuss price control with the president. Taber warmly praised the president for taking a strong stand against the dictators and for aiding Britain, and wound up by inviting him to be the main speaker at the Grange's 75th Anniversary convention in Worcester, Mass., next month.

"It's been eleven years since you addressed one of our conventions, Mr. President," said Taber; "That was our 1930 meeting in Rochester when you were governor of New York. We'd be deeply honored to have you again."

The president warmly thanked Taber but regretfully begged off, saying that the international situation "keeps me chained to my desk." However, he promised to send a message and said he would be at the Worcester meeting in spirit, if not in person.

"You see," he grinned, "I have been a member in good standing of the Grange for 27 years. It's one of my main interests at Hyde Park."

Monopoly Breeder.

FOR an anti-monopoly crusader, tall, scrappy FCC Chairman Larry Fly is producing some peculiar results.

One of the major items of his sensational radio report was the demand that the National Broadcasting company divest itself of one of its two networks, the Blue. Basis of Fly's ruling was that possession of the networks by one concern was monopolistic.

Highest offer so far made to NBC for its Blue network has come from Col. "Bertie" McCormick, who is (1) the arch-isolationist publisher of the Chicago Tribune, (2) owner of WGN, one of the most powerful radio stations in the country, and (3) one of the largest stockholders of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

If McCormick should gain possession of the Blue network he would become the biggest and most powerful radio tycoon in the U. S.

Note: Strong defender of Fly's report was the Mutual Broadcasting system.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It was nice to see F. Van Wyck Mason again. The author of "Three Harbours" and "Stars on the Sea" was just in off a big game hunt in Canada. He had bagged a 1600-pound bull moose with a silver bullet and the world was a pretty pleasant place. Over a beverage at the Harvard Club he told about it.

"It made up for the one I didn't get last year."

"You mean you missed him?"

"NO, NOT exactly. He was too young. He didn't have any horns. He was as close to me as from here to here. I couldn't shoot a moose like that.

"This year I went up to hunt through the Vermilion river country. That's great country. It's in Quebec, above La Tuque. I had Ralph Moyer with me. Ralph's a friend of mine, a Vermont game warden.

"We had Indian guides and we covered 80 miles in 5 days. That's a ten-day trip, ordinarily. We made 15 portages. But it was worth it. I got him just at dusk, from a canoe. The thing I like about it is that I got him at 350 yards. He came out of the forest and down to the water. I could hear him breaking through the underbrush. The water was choppy and I sat there with a Marlin 30-30 in the deepening dusk. Because of the distance, I aimed a bit high and the first shot took him through the withers. He reared up and broke into a run. The second shot was just right. It entered the flank and came out behind the shoulder. He was a big one. But that silver-tipped bullet stopped him in his tracks."

MASON also got 15 grouse and some fine trout fishing. He hurried back to New York to have a day in town to arrange some details for the publication of his new book, "The Rio Casino Intrigue," which is about military intelligence with a Brazilian background. Then he had to hurry over to Philly to speak at a book fair. After that he returned to Baltimore to resume work on his latest historical novel, "Rivers of Glory" which is a companion piece to "Three Harbours" and "Stars on the Sea."

Two weeks from now he must speak in Boston, and after that the duck season in Maryland will be under way, which is trying on a writer who is trying to keep his mind on his business. I have a date to shoot ducks with Mason on the Chesapeake next month. I won't be using silver-tipped bullets, but I'll probably be shaking as much as he was when he drew a bead on that big moose.

A Farmer's Diary

Save the Topsoil

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IT RAINED heavily some days ago. The long fall drought was broken. The rain started slowly, with high winds from the east and south. Leaves and small twigs were scattered everywhere. They floated from the southern wooded pasture midway across our fields.

On the third day darker, heavier banks of clouds began to form and distant thunder rumbled. When evening came a great storm broke, and heavy, intermittent showers followed throughout the night. For three successive days the rains were warm and continuous, like those of April, with sunshine and brilliant rainbow opposite.

To be sure, these showers refreshed the thirsty earth — but all that night, and through the days of rain that followed, I grieved for the loss many cultivated fields sustained.

When I drove to the city twelve miles to the north, over the hill road, I almost feared to look upon the newly planted slopes of wheat. In the first field, on the highest hill to my right, I counted 10 new gullies started toward the center of the trough-like field. Midway between each higher slope a mighty torrent flowed, which tore the soft earth as deep as it was plowed and in some places three to five feet wide. Twelve other upland fields were scored as deeply.

All roadside ditches brimmed with fast-flowing muddy water. Possum Run was overflowing; the Clearfork surged mightily against its banks and roared and boiled along its winding course.

A farmer told me most angrily that a thief had stolen feed and poultry from his barn. "Fifty dollars wouldn't cover the loss," he declared excitedly.

"And that wasn't all you lost," I told him. "Did you know that the best inch of soil in your wheatfield washed away—half of it down the creek and the other half down along the highway?"

Every hour a good-sized farm flows past the city of Cincinnati on its way to the Gulf of Mexico. Old Man River, during every rainy season, steals from all the upland farms the cream of all the land. The prosperity of a country depends upon conserving that wealth. Plant seedling trees, grass or strip farm—fill gullies with growing roots...study how to keep and enrich your farm. It will pay, both now and in the long run.

START CHECK OF SCHOOL PUPILS

Health Commissioner Begins Physical Examinations at Hedges Building.

Mansfield school children started getting their annual physical check-up today.

Dr. William B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, announced that he was starting the examinations but that because he had no assistant to handle the work it would probably be extended far into the winter.

Wild said that 1,779 children were examined at the city's 11 elementary schools last year but that extra enrollment would probably bring this year's figure to more than 2,000 pupils.

The children will be examined for eye, ear, nose and throat defects, posture, nutrition, immunization against communicative diseases and other possible defects.

Wild started his examinations today at Hedges school. Later check-ups will be made at Brinkerhoff, Woodland, Newman, Bowman, Prospect, Bushnell, Carpenter, West Fifth street, Western avenue and St. Peter's schools.

GETS POST IN WATER OFFICE

Battery D Member, Home From Service, To Replace Draftee Called To Service.

Gayle Owings, 375 North Mulberry street, went to work as a bookkeeper in the city's sewage department on a temporary appointment, Service Safety-Director C. M. Crafton announced today.

Crafton said that Owings will work until the return of Joseph C. Ziegler, 185 West Third street, who is at present serving with the army at Fort Warren, Wyo. Ziegler was drafted for service early this summer.

Council passed an ordinance last spring protecting the positions of city employes being called for army service and stipulated that any persons appointed in their place would surrender the post upon the original worker's return.

Owings has just returned from Camp Shelby, Miss., where he has completed a year's training with Battery D, National Guard, which has been made a part of the regular army. Owings was retired under the recent clause allowing men over 28 years of age to be released when possible.

Owings, who is the son of William N. Owings, Republican candidate for the post of Fourth ward councilman, will receive $130 monthly. He was educated in Mansfield public schools and spent the greater part of his life in the city.

Don't Pet a Child After Spanking

By GARRY MYERS, Ph.D.

Assuming that a punishment has been wisely chosen, it brings the best results when it is connected in the child's mind only with his misdemeanor. Practically all the failures and heartaches incident to punishment come from the fact that punishment is always administered by a person, usually the parent. The child seldom connects it solely with the forbidden act. He nearly always reacts to the feelings of the punisher.

Try to Be Impersonal.

Parents should try to be completely impersonal in punishing a child. Certain things should be forbidden, and the child should be told that if he does them he will not escape the penalty. Then either the father or mother should give him the punishment that they have told him will be the result of his act.

You should not raise your voices, become angry or irritated but should calmly go about the unpleasant task.

Parents Behavior Important.

Even though it breaks your heart to hear his piteous cries you should not melt at his pleadings and fondle him after his spanking. That would make him believe that you were sorry about having punished him and that you are acknowledging that you were wrong.

So under no conditions pet him. However, do not act as though you were angry with him. Divert his attention to his toys and go about your business as if nothing out of the ordinary had occurred. This will bring an impersonal relationship in punishment.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. Suppose a child of three while at play alone swears or uses some other naughty word. What would you do?

A. I would ignore it completely. If it persisted after several days, I should explain quietly: "In our home we do not use such words." Then, if after a few weeks he still used these words, I would follow each one I heard with instant physical pain. Of course, it would be stupid for me to punish him, or even rebuke him, if other members of the family used such words in his presence.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Of course she couldn't," my father said. "Your insight has discovered what my reason failed to see."

He smiled at me, and I knew that my tardiness was pardoned. Harry Underwood struck forcibly into the conversation.

"There's another thing," he said. "Lil was making a dress rehearsal tonight. You know her thoroughness. With a set-up like that mourning costume, she smelled something fishy, and wanted to know exactly the lay of the place."

"It's queer that whoever is back of this didn't try to get hold of her tonight," my father commented.

"I think they did," I said, and forthwith repeated to them Miss Whitlock's account of the clever manner in which Lillian had waited to leave until she could join a large party of young people going out of the restaurant. I told them of the waiter who had rushed out at their heels blowing a whistle for a taxicab and of the ruse by which Lillian, pleading illness, had secured for herself the first taxi drawn up for the accommodation of the party of young people.

Did Lillian Suspect?

"Trust Lil!" Harry Underwood said with pride in his voice. "She never takes a chance of letting something unknown creep up on her."

"And yet—what do you think, Harry?" my father asked. "Did she suspect that letter was a decoy?"

The big man reflected for a moment.

"I don't think so," he said at last. "If she had, she wouldn't have collapsed so utterly as she did when she came home. I never saw anything so pitiful."

His voice roughened, choked, stopped, then went on.

"Physical danger, either to herself or to anybody dear to her, never gets Lil down, as you both know. If she had thought the letter was a phoney, and that a trap was being laid for her, she'd have come home ready to gear everything for action and fight to the last ditch.

"It's this damnable fear that she won't acknowledge even to herself, that Marion might have gone off the deep end about a man, which is killing her. You see as yet she hasn't the slightest inkling of that old code book."

"Which is the first thing to be shown her when she awakens," my father said. "Margaret, I give you that assignment."

"And I accept it gladly," I told him, then he put another question to Harry.

"You think then that the ruses she employed to get out of the restaurant—" he stopped, and the big man answered the unfinished question.

"Were simply what she would have employed in any unfamiliar place," Harry said. "She always takes precautions like those."

"They probably saved her an unpleasant experience, if not worse, tonight," my father commented. "And now, Daughter, you are sure that there is no other hidden message contained in this letter?"

"Unless that reference to something blue for the wedding means something to Mary," I said slowly. "I think we have everything decoded. And I do not believe it means anything except a frantic attempt to have the letter shown to Mary."

Spencer Agrees.

"I think you are right," my father said, "but it will do no hurt to check up with Mary this afternoon when she wakens. In the meantime, let me tell you, as I already have told Harry, of some of the things I have discovered—and deduced—from my interview with the gangster who so nearly killed you last night, or rather this morning, as well as other information I have gleaned."

I sat up straight in my chair, every nerve tensed for his revelation. I had known, of course, that he was using all his far flung resources in the endeavor to solve this mystery of Marion's disappearance, but I had not hoped that he would get results so soon.

From underneath my lashes I shot a furtive side glance at Harry Underwood seated next to me. And what I saw in his face—had seen in it, I realized, when I had come back into the room—raised again the hopes which this last letter of Marion's had sent downward.

For the big man, while still grave, even solemn and distinctly saddened, no longer mirrored in his face the despair that had been in it when he had first come downstairs from Lillian's bedside. My father had been able to give him hope, I saw, and he now relieved a poignant fear of my own.

"In the first place," my father said, "Marion's captors will not know she double-crossed them by writing the letters in code."

Salt and pepper

Cut meat in pieces suitable for serving, remove some of the fat or use any meat fat you have on hand, and brown meat in fat in saucepan. Add water, which should be almost at boiling point, add onions, peeled and cut if you like, also carrots scraped and sliced, and cook very gently until meat is tender—an hour or more. Peel potatoes and cut in thick slices, add to stew and continue cooking until potatoes are tender. Serve all together in one dish.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, Oct. 23.

According to the interesting array of astral influences things may be expected to move at high tempo in all the relations of life, business, professional and private. There may be excellent prospects for all new, original and productive programs, if pursued with audacity, initiative and freshness, and if sustained by practical, persistent and enduring efforts. This is particularly important if matters of a public, community or group nature be at stake. Social, domestic and heart affairs may be quite as brilliant and effective.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of extraordinary and expansive adventures, with all affairs moving under high pressure, particularly if the public interests are concerned, and if ingenuity, high skill and innovation be backed up by truly sound and constructive measures. Keen insight, intuition and quick grasp of practical values may give exceptional returns. In the domestic, emotional and social activities a kindred high and exhilarating tempo may be expected. A time to aim at high marks.

A child born on this day should possess exceptional ability for putting things over in a big way, with energy, initiative, skill and originality. Its private life should be quite as stimulating.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

SLICKEST SCHEMES FAIL

No matter how canny you may be, in trying to "put one over," somebody else may prove slicker and foil your most adroit scheme. Or you may try one of the rare coups which are well known to advanced players, and which would work even against most of them, only to find that an opponent has figured out what you are trying and uses the only possible defense against your maneuver. Such things make duplicate bridge a delight to the traveling kibitzer, who moves from table to table to see how different players handle the same situation.

3 NT

Where North then went on to 4-Spades, there was no excitement, as in that correct contract game was easy, with the loss of a trick in spades and two in clubs. At three tables, the bidding stopped in a No Trump game, and there was real interest in the play.

Against the No Trumpers, West in every case led his diamond 5 to the Q, K and A. One declarer practically gave up at the start by cashing the spade K and A, then leading toward the club honors, hoping East would play the A, so he would go down only one trick instead of the two he eventually was beaten.

Another declarer, after winning the first trick, tried one of the slickets of advanced gags, leading Tomorrow's Problem.

	♠ A Q 8 2 ♥ A 6 3 ♦ A Q 9 ♣ A 4 3

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

If West leads the diamond J, dummy puts on the K and East, not paying attention, plays the spade 5, what penalty should South select for the infraction and what should he then do in an effort to have it help him make his contract of 6-No Trumps?

his spade 6, West playing the 9 and the 10 being put on from dummy. East fell for this and won with his J, as most players would. After South won the returned diamond, he led his spade K and overtook it with the A, of course felling the Q and then running the rest of the suit. He made game, with five tricks in spades, two in hearts, two in diamonds before losing control.

At a third table East refused to play his J on the first spade trick, so blocked the suit and beat the contract two tricks. He knew the old gag.

Stukas, Messerschmitts and Spitfires were duplicated for ground use whenever possible by the studios as government production made it impossible to procure the actual article. Tyrone Power plays the title role of a dare-devil American pilot who get his share of excitement upon enlisting with the R. A. F. Betty Grable as the chief feminine interest has opportunity to sing and dance as an American chorine in London and Reginald Gardiner and John Sutton top the cast as English flyers.

GEN. JOHNSON: Senate Gets Second Lend-Lease Measure

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—With scarcely a change in the crossing of a "T" or the dotting of an "I" Mr. McKenzie King has announced that Canada will adopt the Baruch plan for clamping a flexible ceiling over all prices to prevent inflation — including wages, rent and farm prices. Rejecting our present political fumbling with piece-meal fixing of a few prices leaving the principal influence in all prices labor and farm prices to go free.

Johnson

Mr. King has not merely adopted the Baruch plan without any change whatever, but he also advances all the Baruch arguments for that plan with no apparent variations.

As readers of this column know, it has advocated that plan, not just since this argument became hot and vocal, but for many years before that. It was not new. It has been proposed by Baruch for over ten years as a result of his rich experience in price control in 1918.

Opposition to it in this country among political leaders was on the argument that labor and agriculture wouldn't stand for it. As Mr. Baruch proposed it and as Mr. King has accepted it, it provided for labor wage advances in precise proportion to the rise in the cost of living. In this country it proposed the farm price parity and not present price levels — still somewhat depressed in some crops —as a ceiling for farm prices. In Canada Mr. King proposes farm subsidies where necessary.

There is nothing inflexible about either plan. Hard cases are to be subject to adjustment. Neither assumed absolutely to stop price advances. Both sought merely to keep them in hand and prevent the tragedies of sudden runaways getting eventually out of all reasonable control.

Yet our political pundits and their echoes in our war administration wouldn't face any ceiling over their prices. That's where they got their first shock. Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, the great funny-money inflationist, called farm leaders together. There he learned through a robust revolt that the American Farm Bureau federation didn't want any runaway farm prices.

On the labor front the argument against some wage stabilization was scarcely more supportable. Leon Henderson, who is responsible for price control, dodged most of it by saying that labor policies are Mr. Sidney Hillman's baby. It may be so, but runaway wage structures are the basis of runaway price structures.

Argument or no argument, it is a simple fact that opposition to equitable and universal price control instead of piece-meal price fixing is for the most part purely political. It won't stand up in logic or experience. If we can't get rid of this kind of approach to our principal war problems the outlook is far from bright.

SEES FIGHT ON FEDERALIZING INSURANCE PLAN

Brown Calls Program To Take Over Unemployment Benefit System Inexcusable.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Rep. Clarence J. Brown, Ohio Republican, predicted today that the administration proposal for federalization of state unemployment insurance systems would meet stubborn resistance in congress.

"I am confident a substantial majority will rebel against a further invasion of state functions," Brown said. "No plausible excuse can be offered for the government gobbling up these state agencies."

Brown's prediction was made as the U. S. civil service commission ruled that one employe in the Cincinnati office of the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment compensation had violated the Hatch "clean politics" act and that another Cincinnati employe was innocent of an alleged violation.

The commission decided that Mrs. Florence Schneller Marois, a clerk, had violated the law by soliciting Republican campaign contributions last fall from fellow employes. The commission sustained its counsel's recommendation of leniency and said the offense did not warrant her dismissal.

The commission dismissed charges against Louis L. Friedland, supervisor of the Cincinnati office, ruling that he "made only a gesture" toward carrying out his superior's orders and was not in sympathy with solicitation of campaign funds.

Charges against both, the commission said, resulted from activities of Harry J. Patterson, manager of the Cincinnati office. The commission already has recommended Patterson's dismissal, holding that his activities amounted to coercion of employes within the meaning of the Hatch act.

Cases against seven other Cincinnati BUC employes are still to be decided by the commission.

The commission's ruling said that Mrs. Marios "went about her political assignment with but moderate zeal" and on one occasion advised an employe not to contribute.

HIGH COURT TIE OK'S ELECTION

Democrat Judge Retains Post After Protracted Ohio Legal Fight.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — By a tie vote, the state supreme court today affirmed the Stark county appellate court declaring Frank M. Switzer elected common pleas judge over C. B. McClintock at the 1940 election.

McClintock, a Republican, was held to have been elected by a small plurality on the election board's official ballot count.

Switzer, Democratic incumbent, obtained a recount which showed him the winner by a slight margin.

McClintock then filed a contest in the appellate court charging some of the ballots had been tampered with between the time of the official count and the recount. The appellate court refused to disturb the result of the recount, and McClintock appealed to the supreme court.

In a decision last spring the supreme tribunal reversed the appellate court on the ground that it had set up too rigid proof requirements to maintain charges of fraud.

On reconsideration, the appellate court stood by its original decision and McClintock again appealed to the supreme tribunal.

Under the constitution when a tie vote results in the supreme court on consideration of a case where an appellate court has rendered a decision, the appellate court decision is affirmed.

THEY LIKED HUNTING DOGS--- YESTERDAY ONE KILLED CHILD

(By United Press)

KIRTLAND — Merle Murphy, like his father and three brothers, loves good hunting dogs. He is so fond of them that he has overlooked some of their faults.

It was that way with Bill, A 55-pound, black and tan coon dog that Murphy bought from George Armstrong of Geneva on Oct. 11. Bill was a great coon dog but he was a biter. In fact, Armstrong warned Murphy that Bill was dangerous.

But Murphy bought Bill because he believed him a good hunter. He signed a waiver relieving Armstrong of responsibility if Bill should bite someone.

"He was a great coon dog," Murphy said today. "I wouldn't have taken $100 for him because he really could work coons. Last Saturday night, for instance, he treed two coons for me. You get bad actors in every breed of animal but Bill didn't appear very vicious to me. I kept him on a chain in the yard just as I did the other dogs."

Murphy's wife went to the barnyard yesterday to look for her two and a half year old daughter, Merla Jane, [illegible] thought she saw a doll in red-checkered dress and red socks lying near the dog. She went closer and saw it was the mutilated body of her daughter. She screamed and fainted.

Murphy ran out with a club. He clubbed the dog because "it just seemed to me he had gone haywire."

Sheriff James Moloney of Lake county and neighbors wanted to kill the dog immediately for biting the child to death but Coroner James Powell ordered it held under guard. Special deputy Rex Mason guarded the dog for several hours but late last night shot it on the sheriff's order. The head was sent to the state health department laboratory at Columbus for rabies examination.

The Murphys have another child, Merle James, eight months old. They have six other hunting dogs.

WRIT GRANTED

Supreme Court Says Police Don't Need High School Training.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—The petition of Andrew O'Driscoll, a taxpayer, for a writ of mandamus compelling the Cleveland civil service commission to eliminate its rule requiring a high school education of candidates for the police force, was allowed today by the state supreme court.

The court said that the rule of the civil service commission was in conflict with state laws and that the latter prevail.

Laff-a-Day

"Will you excuse her a moment, just until she serves the rest of the guests, Mr. Jones?"

A Mansfield doctor, who is so elated over the Mansfield Tygers' success on the gridiron that he's having trouble keeping his feet on the ground these days, is being kidded about a slip he made in putting the directions on a bottle of medicine for a patient. When J. R. "Bud" Harrington took the medicine home to his wife, he found that the directions required her to take a "teaspoonful after every game." She guessed that it should have read "after every meal" and the doctor soon corrected the error.

Paul Plank, 17-year-old Big Prairie high school student, is going to be glad he found a bundle along the Pennsylvania railroad tracks near Big Prairie yesterday and turned it over to the railroad authorities. E. J. White, Pennsylvania police sergeant in Mansfield, said the youth will receive a reward for his honesty. The package contained four women's coats en route by express to a Mansfield store. White said it apparently fell from a train.

Richland county's blind are anticipating a gala day next week when they come to the Mansfield Salvation Army citadel for their weekly program of recreation. Violinist Dave Rubinoff will be the headline attraction. His appearance is sponsored as a benefit for Mansfield's blind persons by the Mansfield Lions club.

Steve Mike, 741 Brown street, thought he was having hallucinations the other day when he stepped into his back yard to pick some carrots for dinner. The first one he pulled looked more like a pumpkin, and weighed 1½ pounds. Having enough carrot for dinner, but wanting to make sure his eyes were not deceiving him, he pulled a few more plants and found that they resembled undersized pumpkins too. Now he's convinced that he has raised a crop of "super-carrots."

REVEALS BIG FUND MARKED FOR 'ESCORTS'

Committee Testimony Shows 50 Ships Would Be Built To Guard British Aid.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The $5,985,000,000 second lend-lease bill reached the senate today from its appropriations committee along with the hitherto unpublished testimony that $325,000,000 of the money has been earmarked for 50 "convoy escort" ships.

Other testimony, made public by the committee in reporting the house-approved measure late yesterday, disclosed that it might become necessary to divert some of the new appropriation for aid to Russia, and that present funds for purchase of food for Great Britain will be exhausted by the end of this month.

The bill will be taken up for debate tomorrow with prospects of speedy passage.

Chairman Adams (D.-Colo.) said the subcommittee handling the appropriations did not include $50,000,000 additional recently asked by President Roosevelt for war relief activities, because members thought this should be handled in a separate measure.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, testified concerning the need for 50 escorts for convoy work. But, as in the case of most of the witnesses appearing on the bill, much of his testimony was deleted from the printed record due to its confidential nature.

No details on the convoy escorts were released but it was assumed that most if not all of the ships would be turned over to the British for use in escorting vital war cargoes through the North Atlantic danger zone.

Oscar S. Cox, general counsel of the lend-lease administration, testified that some of the new fund might have to be diverted to help Russia, although lend-lease help for the Moscow government was not contemplated when the pending appropriation was introduced, because then it appeared she would be able to pay for war supplies obtained here.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said the $1,000,000,000 earmarked for food was urgently needed to maintain Britain's physical efficiency and morale. He added that all of his department's $502,000,000 allocation from the original lend-lease appropriation would be exhausted by the end of October and food shipments to England would stop in December unless additional funds were provided.

Also, he said, American farmers needed some assurance that they would be paid for their increased production for British aid, whether the war stopped or continued, since they were stepping up output at the request of the government.

The father, who sat in front of the prisoner's dock, bit his lip as sentence was pronounced, but otherwise betrayed no emotion.

Chief Defense Counsel Joseph P. Donahue, Lowell, said he and his associates would start preparation of a petition to Governor Leverett Saltonstall for commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment.

Pecht Believed Lost to Tygers for Massillon Game

Sport Podge by Rex Hess

"Tigers Meet Acid Test In Mansfield Here Friday."

That's the streamer headline appearing in the Massillon Evening Independent, and Sports Editor Luther Emery goes on to say:

"And now comes the test—the acid test, if you please—Washington high school vs. Mansfield—to be played Friday night in Tiger stadium before what appears to be a capacity crowd.

"Fans have been waiting for this game, Ohio's biggest scholastic attraction of the season, for it brings together two undefeated teams in a head-on collision that will have much to do in the way of deciding the mythical state title."

That's the way they feel about this game in Massillon.

That business about a state championship hanging on the outcome of Friday night's battle wasn't just a dream cooked up in Mansfield.

Massillon looks on Mansfield as a real threat to the state title claimed by the Tigers these many years.

Emery told me by telephone yesterday: "We feel here that if any team has a chance to beat Massillon, it's Mansfield."

* * *

If Mansfield's Tygers thought that Massillon scouts would be looking the other way when Lightnin' Jones heaved that touchdown pass to Bob Winbigler in the Springfield game, they have another thought coming.

It was the first time this year Jones had been asked to toss the leather, and the play was good for 50 yards.

Six Massillon scouts in the stands dutifully marked down every move made by the Tygers on the play.

And the Massillon Independent recorded it in this fashion:

"In Jones, Mansfield has a great halfback, a player to be feared. He is a southpaw, and as such is able to pass while running to the left. He throws a good ball."

And it was a good ball, too wasn't it neighbor? So good there wasn't a Springfield player within 15 yards of Winbigler when he dragged it in.

In spite of the 58 to 0 score piled up against Steubenville last Friday night, Coach Bud Houghton of the Tigers wasn't pleased with the performance of his first team.

In fact he's quoted as saying the second team played better than the first, particularly in down-field blocking. "The down-field blocking of our first team was spotty," he declared, "but we were able to get by because of our superior speed."

Hallabrin Moved to Fullback

Takes Injured Graf's Place In Buck Lineup.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Ohio State's battered Buckeyes sought two important secrets on the practice field today—How to recover their lost "zip" and how to smother Northwestern's powerful offense for their Western conference football game here Saturday.

Line crashing Jack Graf may be on the bench and John Hallabrin in Graf's fullback position when 72,000 persons—a stadium sellout—watch the Bucks and Wildcats battle to remain in the Big Ten race.

Graf is limping from a knee injury received in last week's victory over Purdue and Coach Paul Brown says the team will be "immeasurably handicapped" if Graf can't play against Northwestern.

Hallabrin fullbacked and continued to call signals in yesterday's workout, with George Lynn playing blocking quarterback and Les Horvath replacing Tom Kinkade at right halfback.

Brown's worries aren't confined to Graf, since End Charley Anderson has a bad knee and Dick Fisher is troubled with a leg injury.

The snap and sparkle that distinguished early-season workouts and the victories over Missouri and Southern California have been missing since the return from California.

* * *

So today Brown's twin aims on the practice field were to get his patched-up team clicking and to map a defense against the Wildcats. He already has built most of his offense—and hopes it works.

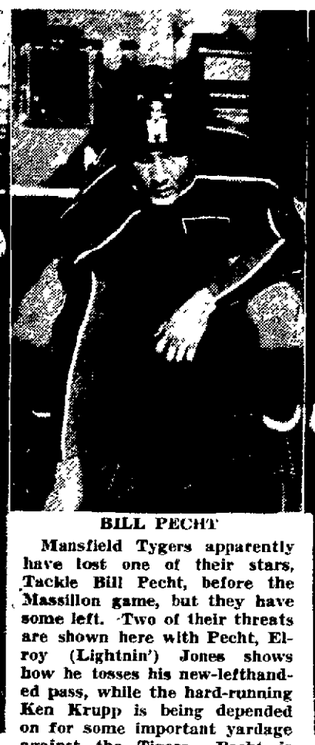
Mansfield Loses Ace, Has Some Left

LIGHTNIN' JONES



BILL PECHT

Mansfield Tygers apparently have lost one of their stars, Tackle Bill Pecht, before the Massillon game, but they have some left. Two of their threats are shown here with Pecht, Elroy (Lightnin') Jones shows how he tosses his new-lefthanded pass, while the hard-running Ken Krupp is being depended on for some important yardage against the Tigers. Pecht is out with an injured ankle.

Ohio Circuit Meets Here

Gridiron Heads To Decide Frosh Use.

Ohio conference members were called together here today to consider use of freshmen on varsity football teams, with several coaches already on record against the proposal.

Publicly in favor of the move were Marietta college and coach Ray Watts of Baldwin-Wallace. Marietta and Ashland as well as several Ohio schools are short of material because students have gone into the armed forces and defense industry jobs.

Said Watts: "In event more boys are called to service, we'll be better prepared to replace them by using freshmen."

But on the other side were these coaches' comments:

Tom Conley of John Carroll: against use of freshmen at any time, especially in mid-season.

Ray Ride of Case: Use of freshman would be "unfair to schools trying to maintain eligibility rules."

Paul Davidson of Capital: "It seems just one or two teams are pressing for permission to play freshmen."

One coach, G. Donald Stern of Kent State, suggested dividing the conference into two divisions, one of larger schools not to be allowed to use freshmen, but the other with schools of fewer than 350 students to play first year men.

Prof. M. S. Douglas of Case, president of the conference, called today's meeting with this comment: "A few schools have been playing with only 15 to 18 men on the squad. There have been injuries as a result and some talk of cancelling games. We thought it best to call the representatives together and consider a remedy."

Canton Calls Off Grid Film Suit

CANTON—(AP)—To preserve "the friendliest of relations between Massillon and Warren high schools, Warren Athletic Director Donald Baker has called off his common pleas court suit to recover moving pictures he took at the Massillon-Cleveland Cathedral Latin football game, Oct 3.

Massillon school authorities seized the film to prevent the Warren school from using it in preparation for the Warren-Massillon game in Warren Oct. 31.

Baker's suit also had asked $1,300 damages for personal humiliation when he was escorted from the Massillon stadium by police.

Earl Ackley, Massillon high school faculty manager, invited Baker to come to Massillon for the film on Baker's promise that it would not be developed before Oct 31.

Agreement was reached in a conference here.

NETWORKS TO BROADCAST BUCK AND JUG GAMES

NEW YORK—(INS)—So far the four networks have scheduled only two football games for Saturday. That's because three of them will be giving details of the important clash in the Big Ten between Michigan and Minnesota at Ann Arbor.

For this contest CBS will have Ted Husing, NBC-Blue, Bill Stern and MBS, Joe Gentile and Bull Lynch.

The other game, to be carried by NBC-Red, also is a Big Ten contest, that at Columbus between Ohio State and Northwestern, with Fort Pearson at the microphone.

Coach Slates Extra Work

Rams To Spend Extra Day On Pass Offense.

Coach Al Fendrick called an extra practice session for tonight in an effort to prepare the Madison Rams with a pass offense for the Marion St. Mary's game tomorrow night at Marion.

As originally scheduled the Rams would have only practiced one day this week, but dissatisfied with the showing the boys made last night Fendrick called another session for tonight.

* * *

Coming on a Thursday the Marion game will crimp the usual Madison practice. On days when the Rams play Friday night they practice on the field the first three days of the week and polish their blackboard work Thursday.

* * *

So far St. Mary's has won one game, tied one and lost two while the Rams were winning three and dropping two.

* * *

In announcing his starting lineup Fendrick said that Fletcher and Paul Wynn would play the ends, Garn and Stone the tackles, Batson and Harfman the guards, and Jack Spriesterbaugh the center.

The backfield will find Harold Hammer at quarter. Ken Windsor and Bill Wynn at half and Reynold Bell at full.

Stock Lake With Pike

Wall-Eyed Pike Put In Pleasant Hill Lake.

Mansfield anglers are going to get a chance at a new species of fish in Pleasant Hill lake, Gordon H. Ensminger, secretary-treasurer of the Conservation and Sportsmen's clubs council, announced today.

Yesterday, he said, approximately 200 breeder size wall-eyed pike were planted in a deep gorge in the lower part of the lake and several hundred more are expected some time this fall—probably November.

* * *

Habitat conditions in the lake, he claimed, are good for the fish because the lake is from 10 to 50 feet deep and has "considerable rocky bottom."

Therefore, he believes that although the wall-eyed pike is not a native of Richland county waters, the breed will flourish.

Found commonly in Lake Erie and in Canadian waters, the fish breed is not only a rarity but highly prized by Ike Waltons for its game fish qualities.

Reason for stocking the lake this fall, Ensminger said, was in order that they might become acclimated to the lake waters by spawning time next June.

At that time, he said, the council would recommend the closing of Pleasant Hill lake to fishing until after the season.

Ankle Injury Benches Mansfield Tackle

Tigers' Backfield Speed Worries Snyder; Pass Defense Stressed

MANSFIELD football fans frantically staging a last-minute rush today for the few remaining tickets available for Friday night's game at Massillon, had bad news today.

Bill Pecht, star tackle, probably won't be in the lineup when the Tygers tangle with the Tigers.

Pecht suffered a sprained ankle in the 41 to 0 victory over Springfield last Friday night, and while he's able to hobble around on the injured leg it doesn't appear likely that he will recover sufficiently to see action against Massillon.

"I'm afraid Pecht won't be able to play," Coach Paul Snyder, of the Tygers, said today, "but that isn't worrying me much. We have John Butler ready to start in Pecht's position, and Butler is one tough football player. The harder the going the better he likes it.

"What does worry me is Massillon's terrific backfield speed. We can't afford to let any of those Tiger ball carriers get loose Friday night. After all you can't tackle a man if you can't get close to him, and if any of those boys get loose I don't know who can catch up with him."

Offensively the Tygers have been brushing up on the plays they have held back against their first five foes, and they'll be ready to shoot the works Friday night. With a chance at the state championship at stake, they see no reason for keeping their assortment of tricks under cover any longer.

Coach Snyder is spending most of the practice sessions this week in attempting to perfect a pass defense. He was far from pleased with the Tygers' work in this department against Springfield, and he admits that if it hadn't been a wet night, Springfield probably would have scored on its aerial attack.

Massillon last night had less than 2,000 reserved tickets yet unsold, while the last batch of 1,500 tickets sent here on Monday was going rapidly.

Massillon expects a capacity crowd of 22,000 for the game, including 18,000 in the stadium seats and 4,000 in temporary bleachers which were erected for the Alliance game, and left up for the Mansfield attraction. There will be some general admission seats placed on sale the night of the game.

Mansfield's special 15-car train also will be filled to capacity, it was indicated last night. The Pennsylvania railroad reported only 80 adult train tickets still available for the trip, and about 100 student tickets. Train tickets may be obtained only at the railroad station.

* * *

Principal Glenn Rohleder announced a special football rally will be held at the high school auditorium tomorrow afternoon, with the program in charge of the cheer leaders.

Pros Play Sunday At Madison Field

Mansfield's professional City News gridders are getting a break this week-end. They've been given permission to play a Sunday afternoon game at Madison high field.

Negotiations were being conducted today to bring a Columbus team composed of former high school and college stars to meet the Mansfield pros Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at Madison.

Meanwhile the pros are being strengthened by the addition of Kunns and DeNero, former Madison stars, and Ed Goettl and Beer, former Mansfield high gridders.

CHAPTER II

"I'm sure he is." Polly's interest was heightened. Ken Palmer was not only big, he was a good-looking man by any standards, although unconventional, boyish. He wore one of those sport style shirts with basted collar open wide to reveal a lot of neck and shoulders. It was a light tan, to match tan trousers. Shoes were open—work sandals called "primitives" and they looked cool and comfortable and very so—so! He was dressed exactly right for summer; September in Phoenix, Ariz., is still very warm.

"Say, do you really go here? Sa-a-ay!"

"I do," Polly smiled. "I'm a senior. I came to register today because I'm going fishing tomorrow."

"I'm going here, and I'm going to like it!"

"I told you this was a girl's school. We never have any male students."

"Right," said Ken, "but—well, it's like this: the trustees couldn't pay dad much. Less in fact, than he was getting back east, as a professor. But being a college president carries some prestige, and dad hopes maybe he can build up Frontier so that—"

"I know," Polly interrupted, kindly.

"Yep. Well, the fact is, dad couldn't afford to send me anywhere else, so the trustees here got together and voted to make an exception in this one case. For me."

"How nice! One male in a college of 600 girls!"

He grinned, and it was a happy contagious gesture. "Sure. But I won't bother anybody, or be bothered. I study."

"And—never a date?"

"Not me! I'm immune to women."

"Oh, that's right. You study." Polly acted ever so serious.

"Yep. History. American history. It's another good reason for staying here. Somebody gave Frontier college a swell library. Lots of old documents, army records, letters and such not even catalogued yet, I find. Precious material from the pioneer era. Invaluable Americana. The Southwest is a virgin field for the conscientious scholar who will—"

"The lectures begin Monday, Mr. Palmer," Polly squelched a smile.

"Oh. I didn't mean to be boring."

"You weren't. But you did rush out with a telegram. Or had you forgotten?"

"Say, I had, at that! Say—you distract people. Are you — you are awfully pretty. And I—"

"Oh thank you, kind sir!"

"I'm not joking. I'm—I mean, I've got to move fast, I guess. Look here, she wants us to send a servant to the college airport to meet her."

"Who? Miss Boone?"

"Sure. Read it."

Polly took the yellow sheet. It was a long, and therefore expensive straight-rate telegram, obviously written with blithe disregard for brevity or cost. It was addressed to the president of Frontier University.

"This is to advise you:" the message read, "that Miss Joy Kathryn Boone has elected to transfer her college affiliations and after giving due study to all the various catalogues has chosen Frontier for matriculation this fall. I am pleased herewith to submit her entrance and transfer credits, which of course you are at liberty to verify. You will note that they are excellent.

"Miss Boone, as you may know, is a young person of remarkable enthusiasms. She chose a western college partly under my guidance because I feel that the environment there is likely to be more wholesome than the somewhat artificial atmosphere encountered in urban surroundings!"

"For Pete's sake!" Polly McMurray interrupted the reading.

"Yeah, sure!" Ken agreed, equally ambiguous. He was reading over her shoulder now.

"You are to reserve the best dormitory suite for her, refinishing it if necessary. Also hire an Indian girl in costume for her personal maid. I shall want residence quarters and maid service somewhere near the campus also. Miss Boone will arrive in her new plane, which I may add she has ordered painted blue and gold, the Frontier University colors. She looks forward to college life with eagerness, sir, and may be expected to take active part in extra-curricular endeavors, especially in her favored sports of tennis, badminton, aviation and riding. You are to order three saddle horses and outfits for her immediately, charging to her account.

"I am wiring five thousand dollars herewith as initial deposit and will arrange necessary financial credits immediately upon arrival.

"Miss Boone's plane should arrive Phoenix at 4 p. m. today, so please have servant meet her at college airport.

"Signed: Bettina Carlson, Secretary to Miss Boone."

* * *

Polly handed the telegram back to Ken, and caught her forehead in a mock swoon.

"Whee—ew!" she breathed.

"I told you!" Ken said. "What'll I do?"

"Do?"

"Yes. Dad said she must be a girl of considerable drive, as well as considerable money. He's so rushed, here at registration time, he asked me to—"

"Of course." Polly was looking off, thinking fast.

"But gosh, Miss McMurray, there's no college airport!"

"No. Yes! Yes, Ken!" She could call him Ken, unconsciously. He was like that. Easy to know, and like. "Yes. She expects it. And she isn't used to being disappointed. She's—she's probably even pretty! Listen to me, Ken Palmer!"

Suddenly Polly grabbed him by the shirt front as she might have done her big brother Ward. A devilish gleam had brightened her eyes.

"Frontier life is going to be exciting this fall, I predict," she said, and then she said a whole lot more, rapidly. She did Ken's thinking for him. She listed items—one, two, three, four—on her fingers like a little girl. And then she sent Kent Palmer away at a run.

"Hurry!" she yelled after him, and herself departed in another direction.

She went through that big oak door (safely, this time) and to a telephone booth inside; after a bit had her brother Ward on the line. Sister like, she gave him some pat orders. Something of her excitement, too, flowed over the wire, and Ward McMurray was a young man.

"Okay, Sis," he agreed. "Four p. m."

"Thanks, Wardy. you're a darling."

She hung up in a hurry and burst out of the booth. For the second time today she ran into a man. He had been walking down the corridor.

"I beg your pardon!" he apologized, smiling. Then he was gone.

Polly stared. There was another edition of Ken! That, surely, was the new president, Dr. Palmer. But he didn't look it. He was youngish himself. A touch of temple gray, but distinguished. A bright smile. A snappy swing to his walk. Head erect. And Handsome!

She knew he was a widower. The newspaper story about his appointment here had said that much. But—lordy! Poor old Professor Botts who had steered Frontier for the past six years was sensible, and by comparison made Dr. Palmer here a stripling. He must have married awful young, to be Ken's dad.

Polly hastened on.

Outside again she buttonholed Pedro, the campus gardener and building maintenance man. He and she were already good friends. She spoke rapidly, slipped a dollar into his dirty hand, and sent him off running.

"Plain white, Pedro. The oily kind, or white wash like you use on trees. And hurry. You hear?"

The humble Mexican waved his agreement. Middle-aged, he loved youth, loved excitement. He knew Polly McMurray created fun any time.

Then she saw Ken Palmer returning. He had on old clothes. A faded shirt and overalls. He carried a broom.

"Good!" she greeted him. "We're to meet Pedro the yard man in 10 minutes."

"I don't get it," said Ken. "You issue orders like an army major, but you don't tell me anything."

Polly smiled. "It's because I'm used to bossing my brother and daddy. They spoil me. But I'll tell you this much—we're going up. Up there." She pointed high toward Ho-Ho-Kam ridge.

"Me? I am a city man. I use elevators exclusively!"

"That's what you think! The skyscrapers out here were all designed by Nature, mister. In 10 minutes you're going on your first mountain climb." With a bucket of paint!"

Miss Joy Kathryn Boone was having to fight the controls of her plane. It was a gorgeous blue-and-gold ship, structurally perfect too, but it bucked strange, invincible enemies over these mountains.

"Bettina," Joy shouted at the woman near her in the little cabin, "you promised sunshine! Definitely."

Miss Carlson looked worried. "I know, dear, but—"

"Even the map says so. An average rainfall of only six inches a year—imagine! I think there's a year's supply right ahead of us!"

She had tried to fly over the storm that boiled up from the western horizon to meet her, but clouds seemed to engulf everything. She dropped down again and found snorting rain, then lightning fingers began clutching at her.

"What shall we do, Joy?" Miss Carlson was deeply concerned now.

"Fly. It's all we can do. When I get a peek at the earth at all it's nothing but rocky mountain tops."

"Goodness! Are—do you think it's safe?"

"You do the worrying. I'm busy." But blond Joy turned to flash a quick smile of assurance. She loved Bettina Carlson, really; Bettina who was twice her age and, besides being her secretary, was the only mother she could remember. Bettina's prim efficiency always waned noticeably when they were in the air. "We can talk about something else. I'm thrilled to pieces about college."

"I hope you like it."

CHILD ROUTS ROBBERS

PASADENA, Cal. —(U.P.)— Because she retained sufficient presence of mind to say "Please don't shoot" and then scream, 5-year-old Eileen Brooks saved her parents' home from robbery. The burglar slowly emerged from behind a chair, revolver in hand but the child's coolness routed him before Eileen's mother could respond to her scream.

The chimney swift cannot walk, but its feet and legs, braced by its spine-like tail feathers, are strong enough to hold the bird to the chimney wall as it roosts at night.

SHIP SINKINGS WORRY STOCK MART TRADERS

Market Operates In Narrow Range; Far East News Brings Some Cheer.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market continued to operate today with an extremely narrow compass showing a somewhat even division of gains and losses.

Hesitancy at the opening reflected Wall Street concern over the latest sinkings of American ships but whatever selling was prompted by this news was taken without appreciable damage to values.

Tending to offset the influence of ship losses as a speculative consideration was a slightly better sentiment on the far eastern situation and favorable appraisals of third quarter earnings reported so far but these factors produced little increase in bidding except in special stocks.

Analysts saw indications of improvement in the gasoline supply picture in the American Petroleum Institute's report of a 1,123,000-barrel increase in stocks of the motor fuel in the eastern area for the week ended Oct. 18.

Also studied was the Edison Electric Institute's weekly survey on electric power consumption, disclosing a contra-seasonal decline of 1.3 per cent in the period ended Oct. 18 as compared with the previous week.

ATTEND CHAPEL

BUTLER—The public will attend a chapel program at 11:15 Thursday morning in the high school auditorium. An ice cream festival, sponsored by the seniors, will follow the program.

Is your child a NOSE PICKER?

It may be more than just a nasty habit! It may be a sign of worms. Yes, ugly, crawling roundworms inside your child! Other warning signs are fidgeting, "picky" appetite, crankiness, itching in certain parts.

Roundworms can cause real trouble! If you even suspect your child has them, get Jayne's Vermifuge right away! Jayne's is America's best known proprietary worm medicine. Scientifically tested and used by millions for over a century. It expels stubborn worms, yet acts very gently. If no worms are there, Jayne's acts merely as a mild laxative. Be sure you get Jayne's Vermifuge.

Rumasol Overcame My Discomforts and Troubles, Now Feel Like a New Person

Suffered from severe nervousness, aches and pains in knees and limbs until she took Rumasol.

Rheumatism bothered her various times for 45 years and at times could hardly walk says Mrs. Louise Dapore. R. F. D. 7, 76 years of age, Versailles, Ohio.

"My limbs were so stiff that I could hardly trust myself to move about. I was afraid I would fall. I had such sharp pains and swelling in my knees that this trouble made me nervous and was restless, also sleepless at night. My condition was worse during the damp, cold, stormy weather of the past winter. Rumasol has given me remarkable relief and my suffering has gradually lessened. My nerves are steadier and I sleep better. I am going to take more Rumasol which agrees with my system and seems generally beneficial to a person like me who has advanced in age. If you suffer with rheumatism in any way, try Rumasol and get relief as I have."

CALLS STRIKES AGGRESSOR AID

OPM Declares No Action Must Be Taken That Will Impede Production of Arms.

retary of Navy Knox, William Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, declared that labor and management must co-operate with the government to get uninterrupted defense production, and called on them to use present government conciliation services to adjust labor disputes.

The OPM statement said:

"The defense program, which is growing larger every day, depends for its success on the patriotic support of labor and management. Uninterrupted production is the pressing need. The interruption of work by strikes or slow downs is the greatest help the aggressors can get in these days when material on the battlefield is everything."

The OPM then directed attention to the fact that there are conciliation services in the department of labor, the OPM labor division and finally the national defense mediation board. Its statement then continued:

"These means are provided in order to avoid breaks in production. We must have the man hours on the job. Our president has said, 'This is not the time to take chances with the national safety through any stoppage of defense work on defense production.'

"The OPM fully indorses the voluntary system set up to handle disputes and it expects all parties involved in the production of defense material to take no action which will impede production.

"Time is short. We need the man hours; your country needs your strength and skill. Let us have all the co-operation and help possible."

The statement came as the CIO's United Mine Workers union set Saturday midnight as the deadline for captive coal mines to meet its demands for a union shop. Since the mine workers do not work without a contract, a new strike will be called in the captive pits unless there is some settlement of the dispute by the deadline.

Defense officials said that a strike of the 43,000 captive miners would cripple steel production since 95 per cent of the coal from captive mines goes into steel mills.

YOU MAY STILL BORROW
And
YOU MAY STILL BUY

From the number of inquiries we have received, evidently many people have a mistaken idea of the new regulation of Consumer Credit.

Some were of the opinion that they would not be permitted to buy certain commodities—others, that there would be restrictions on their borrowing for personal and family needs.

THE NEW REGULATION CURBS ONLY THE ABUSE AND NOT THE USE OF CONSUMER CREDIT

We will continue to provide needed funds to any worthy borrower for any sound economic purpose.

You may buy automobiles, make home improvements, centralize debts, obtain money to pay taxes, insurance premiums, medical, hospital, or dental service or any of a dozen or more purposes for which extra funds are needed from time to time.

BUY WISELY--BORROW WISELY...

A soundly financed citizen is an asset to the community and the economy of the nation in these times of stress. We are ready to cooperate in any way possible. Further information concerning our PERSONAL LOAN SERVICE will be given you gladly—in person, by telephone, or by mail.
